Biographical History:
Michael Maurice Williams (1956-2018) was a visual artist born in Detroit, Michigan, who later made Savannah, Georgia, his home and the center of his artistic practice. Williams informally studied art from a young age, drawing inspiration from Rodin, Renoir, Giacometti, Richter, and the classical masters. Working primarily in drawings, murals, and assemblages, Williams developed a distinctive voice marked by bold, expressive imagery. His work became a meaningful part of Savannah's local art scene, with pieces displayed at community venues, including the Green Truck Neighborhood Pub. Williams was involved with both ARTS Southeast and the SeeSAW (See Savannah Art Walls) initiative. In 2012, he co-founded the Drive Thru Art Box located at the Green Neighborhood Truck Pub, located at 2430 Habersham Street. He dedicated himself to his art, always keeping the advice of his mentors and friends, W.W. Law and Luther Vann, in mind.

A 2001 film, A Conversation with Mike Williams, documented his practice and perspective, offering a record of his influence on the city's artistic community. Williams died in 2018.
